Thurſday, September 5. 1706.

London, September 5.

'In former Courants ſeveral Pieces have been given, 'from Time to Time, relating to the Treaty ſet 'on Foot from accomodating the Differences be- 'tween the King of Pruſſia and the Princeſs Do- 'wager of Naſſau Friſeland about the Suceeſſion 'of Orange; and the laſt Piece publiſh'd on this 'Subject, was a Letter from the Princeſs Dowa- 'ger of Naſſau Friſeland dated the 31ſt of July, '[incerted in the Courant of Auguſt 19.] We 'now communicate to the Publick a Memorial 'preſented by the Pruſſian Miniſter to the States 'General the 13th of Auguſt, in Anſwer to the 'ſaid Letter of the Princeſs.

High and Mighty Lords,

WHen after the Death of his late Majeſty the King of Great Britain, your High Mightineſſes reſolv'd to take upon you the Office of Executors of the Wills of his ſaid late Majeſty and of his Highneſs Frederick Henry Prince of Orange, both of glorious Memory, you declar'd at the ſame Time, that as to the Differences that were riſen between his Majeſty the King of Pruſſia and her Highneſs the Princeſs Dowager of Naſſau as Mother and Guardian of the Prince her Son, you adviſ'd both Parties to make an amicable Accommodation, laying before them ſolid Reaſons to that purpoſe, and offering your good Offices and Mediation for bringing it to a Concluſion, which you judg'd would be the ſafeſt and moſt advantagious Courſe for both Parties and for your State. The King of Pruſſia, to ſhew his Confidence in ſo good and ancient Allies as your High Mightineſſes, and his Regard for your Sentiments; and being beſides inclin'd, as his Majeſty naturally is, to prefer gentle Methods in Differences with his Friends, and on this Occaſion with his near Relation, as are their Highneſſes the Princeſs of Naſſau and the Prince her Son; accepted immediately not only the Propoſition of the ſaid Accommodation, but has in all Points facilitated the Negociation of it, tho' it has been ſpun out above 4 Years and been render'd very difficult by thoſe who would not find their Account in ſuch an Accommodation. It would be too long and tireſome to recount particularly how much his Majeſty out of a Deſire of this Accommodation and Affection for his Highneſs the Prince of Naſſau, has from Time to Time receded from his juſt Rights and Intereſts; Your High Mightineſſes and all impartial Perſons, by reviewing the Pieces laſt printed, and particularly the Offers made to the Princeſs by his Majeſty the 23d of February this Year, [incerted in the Courant of the 8th of May,] will be mov'd by a Principle of Equity to acknowledge, that 'tis not owing to his Majeſty that this Accommodation has not been concluded, to the Advantage of his Highneſs the Prince of Naſſau: Some of the Deputies of your High Mightineſſes own'd as much in the laſt Conferences, when they declar'd that in their Opinion both Parties were ſo near agreeing, that they could not break off. In ſhort, it would be eaſy to ſhew, even by the Declarations of the Princeſs ſign'd with her own Hand, that his Majeſty out of a Deſire to conclude the ſaid Accommodation has generouſly granted all ſhe has ask'd, and what ſhe declar'd would content her.

'Tis therefore the more ſurprizing, that after his Majeſty had made ſuch Advances towards this Accomodation, and when He as well as your High Mightineſſes and all the World thought it was ready to be ſign'd, the Princeſs ſhould in her laſt Letters make new Demands to your High Mightineſſes, relating to your Guarantie, in a Sence which you your ſelves think is too extenſive, and to your ſuffering ſome Inconveninces in the Partition of ſome Part of the Succeſſion of Orange,

His Majeſty does not examine thoſe Difficulties made by the Princeſs, he rather wiſhes your High Mightineſſes could find an Expedient to ſatisfy her Highneſs concerning them: But ſhe has added to them the Difficulty of the Minority of the Prince her Son, tho' that Reaſon has not hinder'd her from treating of this Accommodation four Years together; and tho' his Highneſs being very near of Age may take the better Cognizance of his own Affairs, and judge that an Accomodation on ſo good Terms will be more advantagious to him, than Differences with ſo kind a Relation as is the King of Pruſſia.

The Princeſs has been pleas'd to alledge likewiſe, as another Obſtacle to this Accommodation, the Oppoſition made by the Prince of Naſſau-Siegen, tho' ſhe formerly was of Opinion that the ſaid Prince being of the collateral Line and not directly deſcended from the Princes of Orange, has no Action againſt the Poſterity of thoſe Princes, which Poſterity have on all Accounts a better Title than he to the Succeſſion, as well by Right of Blood as by the Diſpoſitions or Wills of their Anceſtors. The Will and Deed of Truſt of Prince Philip William, which are the only Foundation of the Pretentions of the ſaid Prince of Naſſau-Siegen, being beſides null in the Spaniſh Netherlands, by Default of the eſſential Solemnity of the Superſcription and Octroy granted; and being expir'd, with regard to the Eſtate lying in the united Provinces, in the Perſon of Prince Frederick Henry on whom that Eſtate was intail'd by that Will. And for theſe evident Reaſons it is, that his Majeſty does not think fit that any Reply ſhould be given in his Name to a printed Libel which the Prince of Naſſau-Siegen has very lately publiſh'd, in which are indecent Expreſſions that deſerve another Anſwer than can be given by the Pen.

In Concluſion, the Princeſs has thought fit to alledge one Reaſon to your High Mightineſſes, why ſhe she retracts all that has pass'd under your Mediation relating to the Treaty of Accommodation; which Reason, in the Opinion of the most sensible part of Mankind, and for divers weighty Causes, she would probably have done better to have pass'd over in silence: For besides that the Circumstances are different from what is alledg'd, his Majesty, like a kind Father, always left his Son the Prince Royal at Liberty to follow his own Inclinations in the Point of Marriage.

The remaining Part of this Memorial shall be found in our next.

Whereas the Back part of the Dwelling-House of Mr. Edward Gould at Highgate was about 3 Weeks ago broke open by some House-breakers, who took away his Gard'ner's dark Colour'd Drugget Coat, and cut of the Lace Sleeves of his Coachman's dark Blue Livery Coat, with Linnen and other Goods; and whereas on Thursday the 22d of August, between 1 and 2 in the Morning, some House-breakers broke open 4 out Doors of his Gardens adjoyning to the said House, and attempted to break into the same, by breaking Iron Bars and Shutters, which they would have actually effected had not the Noise they made waked the said Mr. Gould and his Servants. These are therefore to give Notice, that whosoever shall discover the said House-breakers, or any of them, so that they may be Apprehended and Convicted, shall receive upon their or his Conviction 10 l. as a Reward from the said Mr. Gould, besides 10 l. more from the Inhabitants of Highgate, according to the Contracts they are entred into for incouraging the discovering and apprehending of House-breakers; and a Warrant will be given from the Justices of the Peace to the discoverer worth 5 l. to exempt him from all Parish Offices and Duties whatsoever, that he may assign to whom he pleases.

P. S. The House-breakers made a new Attempt on Monday Morning about 3 a Clock to break into the said House, and actually broke open 2 Garden-Doors; but were prevented by the Servants sallying out and firing at them. Now besides the Rewards a bve-mention'd, if any one of this Gang of House-breakers will by Letter or otherwise discover his Accomplices to Mr. Gould, so that they may be convicted, he will give him 20 l. and use his best Endeavours to procure him the Queen's Pardon.

Whereas two Gentlemen with two Boys took Coach in Cornhill on Tuesday Morning about 9 a Clock the 27th of August last, and were set down by the Pound beyond St. Giles's Church Holborn, and immediately took Horse, leaving in the Coach a short light Head of Hair, a Wig for a Youth, and a Red Velvet Cap with Silver Lace, both worn. If the Coachman or any other Person brings them to Mr. Sam Crouch Bookseller the corner of Pope's-Head-Alley in Cornhill, he shall have 10 s. Reward.
